Why Finish?

From now through the year 2018, Oklahoma will have 541,000 job vacancies. Of those, 308,000 will require education beyond high school.

The Tulsa Regional Chamber is partnering with area higher education institutions and local employers to challenge Tulsans to go back to school. The Talent Dividend initiative is a goal to increase the number of certifications and degrees completed by one percentage point over the next five years.

Colleges, Universities and Technical Schools

Going back to school doesn't mean starting at the beginning. A number of higher education institutions in the Tulsa area are committed to helping adult students complete their certification or degree by maximizing existing credit hours and offering fast track completion programs.

Visit FinishForGreaterTulsa.com for a list of participating colleges and technical schools.

Whether you finish for your community, your family or your own personal fulfillment, college completion has an impact greater than any one person. Education is an economic driver. For the Tulsa area, increasing college attainment by just one percentage point would have a $646 million economic impact.

Don't just finish for you, finish for greater Tulsa.
